Cancellation

If you, the therapist, needs to cancel session(s):

1. If a therapist needs to cancel a scheduled direct care session, they must first reach out to their BCBA and scheduler ASAP.

- The therapist and the BCBA can then coordinate who notifies the client of the cancellation.

SCHEDULE CHANGES

- An RBT may discuss short term or temporary schedule changes with caregivers, but must get those changes approved by the BCBA before they are finalized
- Any permanent or long-term schedule changes, including reducing hours significantly, must be discussed directly with the BCBA

If the client needs to cancel session(s):

1. When working in-home, it is likely that caregivers will notify RBTs of cancellations directly. If this is the case, RBTs should let scheduler and their BCBA know as soon as possible.

What will the first sessions look like?

WHAT IS PAIRING?

Pairing is a crucial first step of earning the learner's trust

You pair by engaging with the learner's preferred items, playing, being silly, showing interest in their preferred activities

A LOT OF PLAYING

WHAT SHOULD I BRING

BCBA should be able to help you prep, case by case, on what to bring

Phone / Computer for data collection and note writing

Depending on age and interest (if you already have it) toys/activities

COMMUNICATION WITH FAMILY / GUARDIANS

BCBA will set up initial communication (may be a group chat)

Remember: you are a PROFESSIONAL in someone's home, keep conversations professional

Simple Steps to Pair

ENGAGEMENT

Get on the floor with them

Don't be afraid to be silly!

Be creative with what the family has!

DON'T PLACE TOO MANY DEMANDS

When playing, make statements: I love how you're playing. That game looks fun. This is so cool!

Pairing isn't work time, this is where you are the fun person with all the toys

You want the learner to start approaching you and are happy when you arrive!

SMALL EASY DEMANDS

If you have to place demands or are starting to work on instructional control start LIGHT

Simple demands: high 5's, clapping, imitation, pick up, etc

INSTRUCTIONAL CONTROL

What is Instructional Control?

Instructional control means that you and the learner have a positive working relationship where the learner is motivated to follow your lead.

When do we establish it?

When you first meet your learner, it is important to focus on and establish pairing. Through pairing, we can establish and maintain instructional control.

Why do we need it?

If you want to teach your learner a self-help skill, communication skill, or gain your learner's cooperation in anything, then earning and maintaining instructional control is the best way to go.

7 Steps

1. Maintain access to the learner's reinforcers (controlled environment)
 2. Show the learner that you are fun (pair)
 3. Show the learner that you can be trusted (follow through)
 4. Show them that following your directions benefits them (reinforce)
 5. Provide consistent reinforcement
 6. Demonstrate that you know your learner's priorities as well as your own
 7. Show the learner that ignoring your instructions or choosing challenging behavior will not get them what they want

TYPES OF DATA COLLECTION

FREQUENCY is the measure used to count the number of times a behavior occurs.

DURATION is the time elapsed from the start to the end of a behavior.

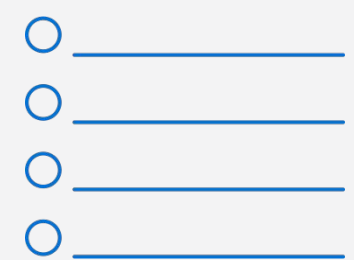

PERCENT CORRECT is a measure of the percent of trials the child responded correctly for a specific target. Mark the trial as independent if they were able to respond without any prompts.

Mark the trial as an error if prompting was necessary or if the child responded incorrectly.

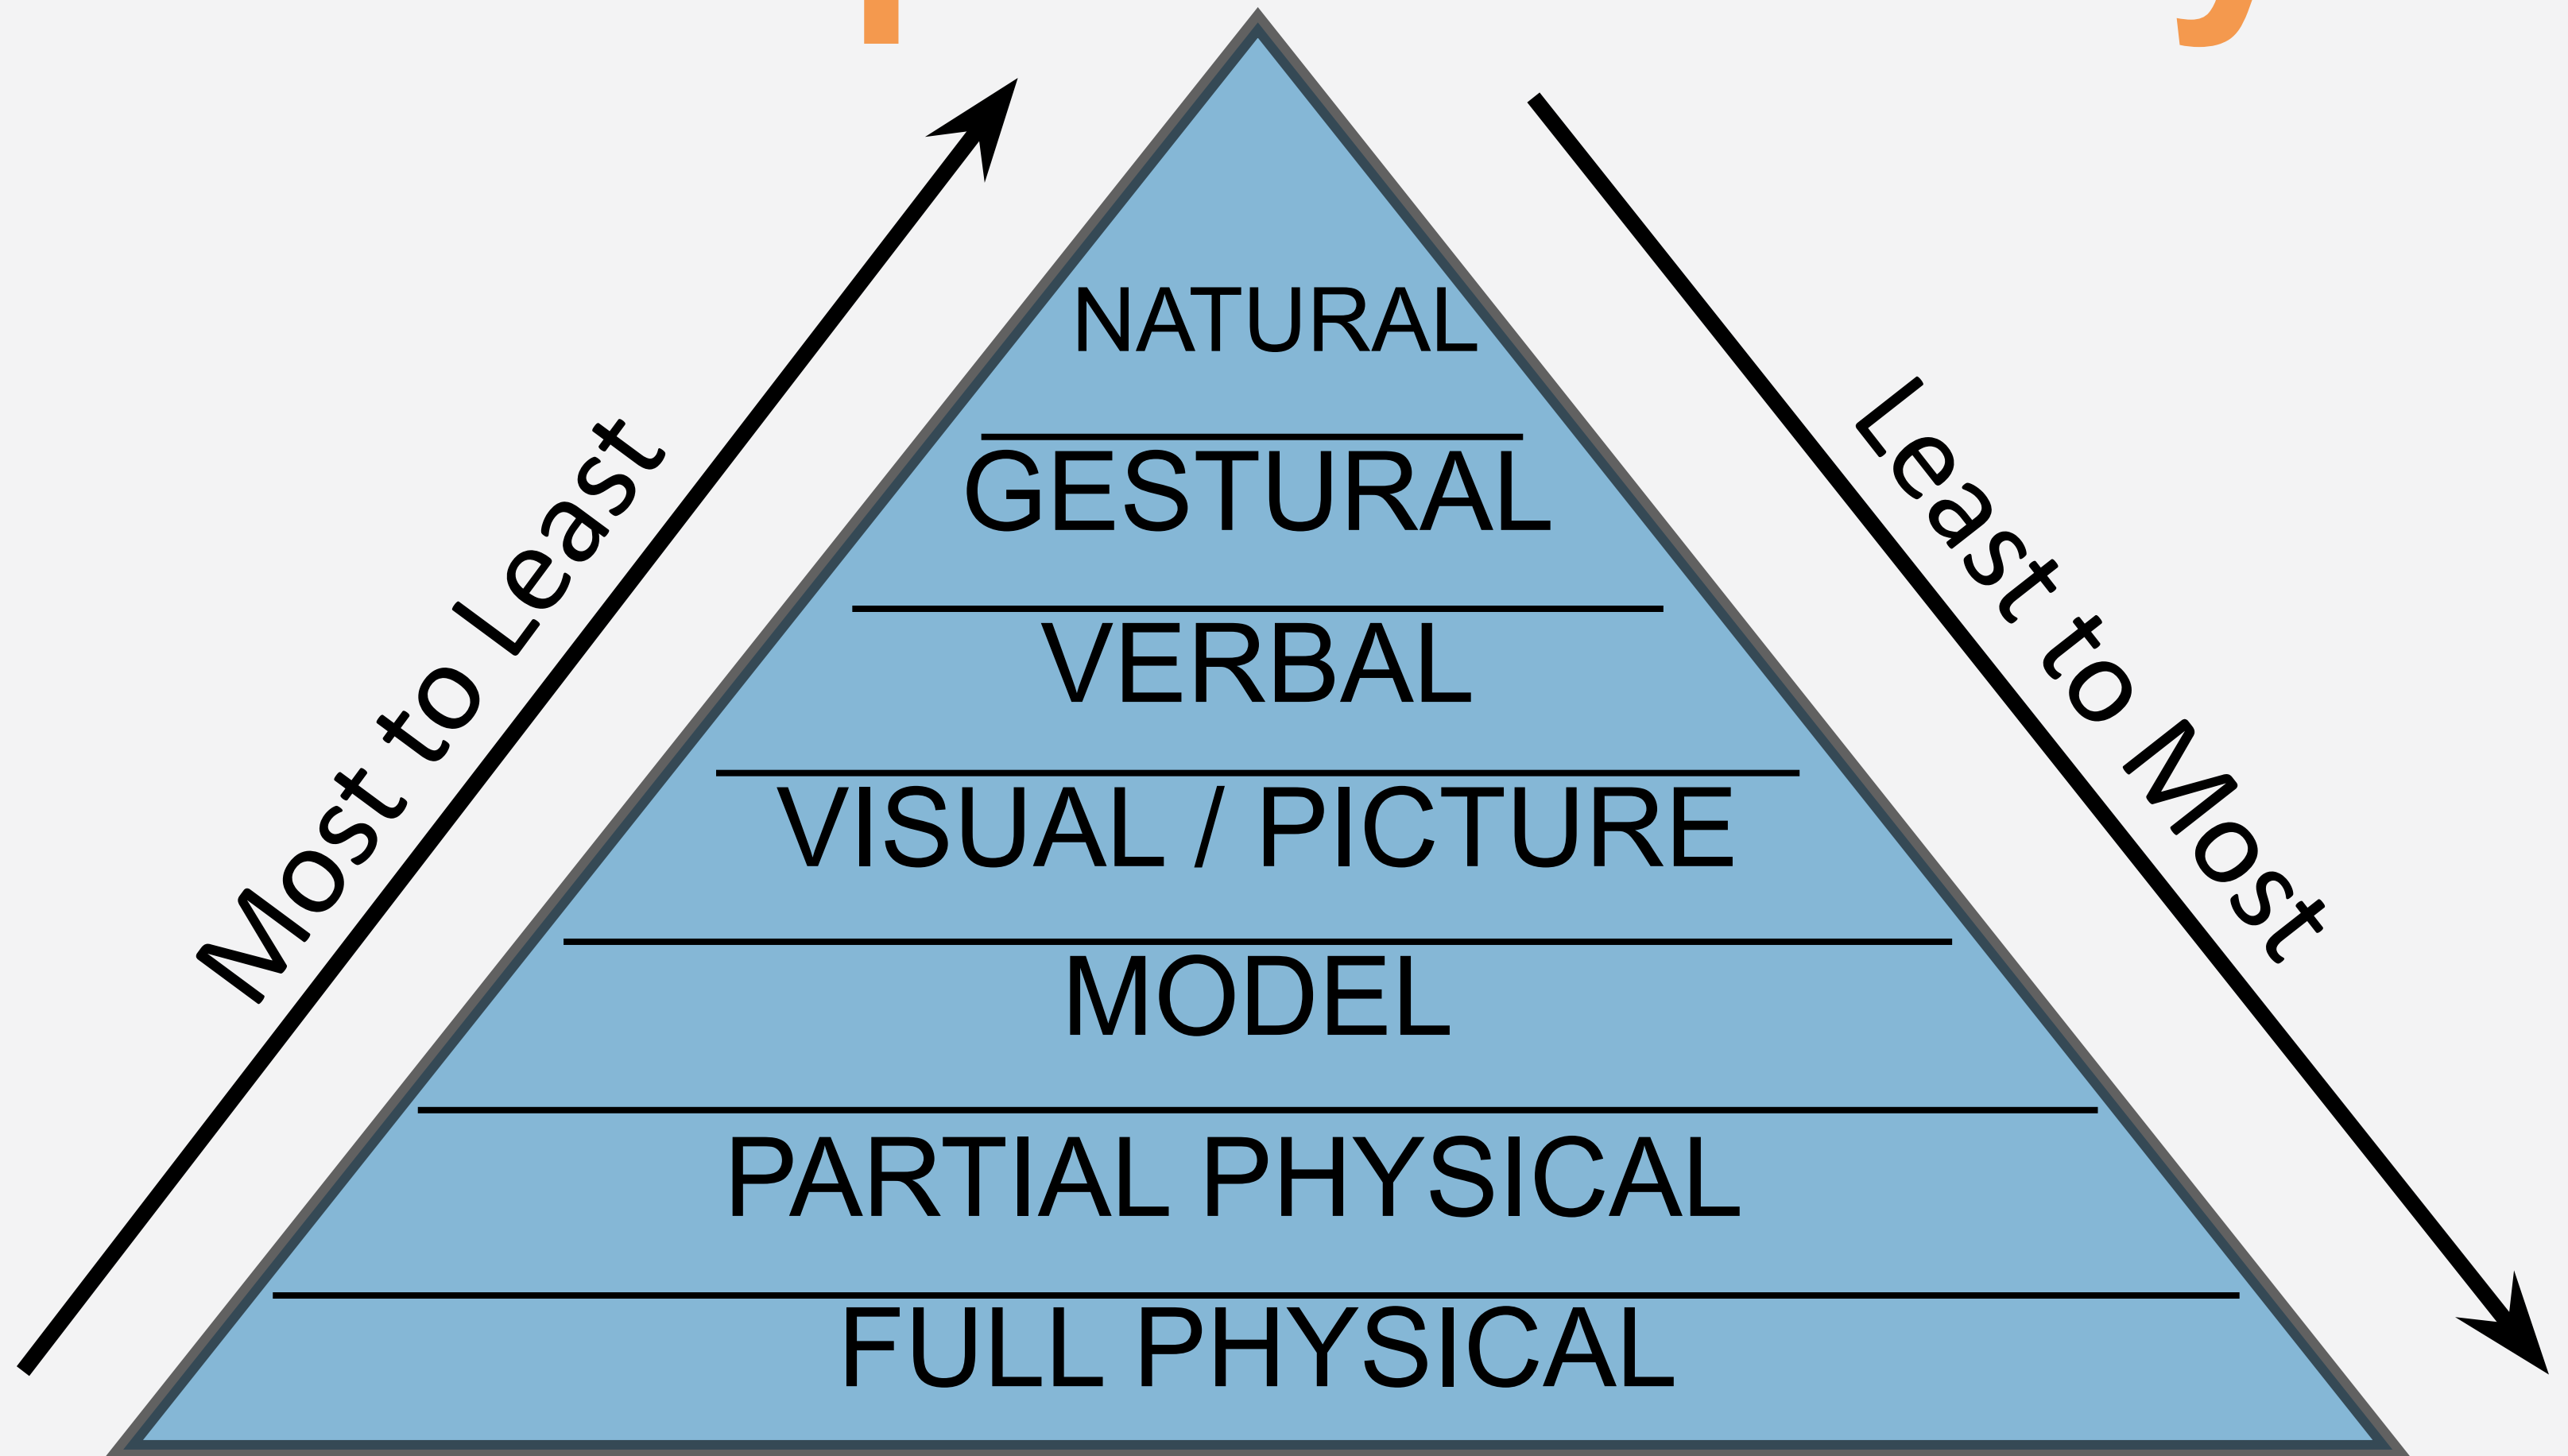

TASK ANALYSIS is the process of breaking down a complex skill into smaller, more manageable steps. You can record whether or not the child was able to complete each smaller step independently rather than completing the whole activity. EX: washing hands.

TIME SAMPLING refers to a variety of methods to record behavior at specific moments. One divides the observation period into intervals and then record either the presence or absence of a behavior within or at the end of the interval.

DTT VS NET

Discrete Trial Teaching VS Naturalistic Teaching

DTT

A structured teaching method where a complex skill is broken down into smaller components, which are taught and reinforced

BENEFITS

1. Useful for teaching brand new skills or behaviors
2. Contrived situations ensure the skills are being practiced multiple times each session
3. Easier to identify where a client needs additional support

EXAMPLE

While sitting at the table, the RBT places the instruction, touch orange. The client touches orange and the RBT praises client.

NET

A teaching method where behavior change goals and reinforcement are incorporated into the learners environments and interests

BENEFITS

1. Learning is based on the function of skills in learner's everyday life
2. Focuses on the interests of the child, making it easier to motivate
3. Encourages generalization
4. Doesn't feel like work!

EXAMPLE

While playing on the floor, the RBT picks up red blocks and makes a tower. The client then picks up red blocks and makes a tower.

DTT or NET

I tell the client to match and give him a blue card.
When he matches, I reinforce him by giving him a smartie.

While the client plays with cars, I roll a car down a hill on a track and say “you try”. When the client imitates, I give him my car to play with and provide social praise.

ABC Data Collection

Antecedent: what happened before the behavior

Consequence: what happened after the behavior

Student Name: _____		A-B-C Data Collection Form			Date: _____

YOU TRY IT

Michael asks for candy. I tell him "not right now". He bangs his hand on the table and yells "I WANT IT NOW". I point to his choice board and say, "we can pick one of these options".

What is the Antecedent? Behavior?
Consequence?

YOU TRY IT

Sandy sits at the lunch table with her hands in her lap after I asked her to take a seat. I give her a high five and say "I love how you're waiting".
